Good-by, Bell Punch.

THE METROPOLITAN'S EFFORTS TO GET "A SQUARE DEAL."

[Boston Herald.]

Of late the directors of the Metropolitan railroad have held special meetings for the purpose of considering the best course to pursue in order to stop the terrible shrinkage in their receipts by reason of the dishonesty of a number of their employes. Despite the most vigilant espionage and the prompt discharge of conductors detected in stealing, the facts are that the leaks had become simply appalling, and some immediate action was imperative if the stock was expected to pay a respectable dividend this year. After prolonged sessions, it was finally voted to close a contract with Messrs. Lewis & Fowler of Brooklin, N. Y., for equipping all cars run by the corporation with the device known as the "alarm passenger register."

In view of this result of these meetings, the writer concluded that a history of the "dummies" and "little jokers," by the use of which such an excitement had been created, would be interesting reading, and he sought out an old "railroader," who keeps well posted, and who has a happy, though nowadays a rare, faculty of calling things by their right names. "Yes," observed that worthy functionary, "it is about a dozen years since the musical ring of the virtuous bell-punch was first heard in our street cars, and, after all, the problem still remains unsolved: 'How can the road get all it earns?' Of course, before the novelty wore off, every passenger's eye was fixed on the musical pepper-box, and every ear was on the alert to catch the tinkle of the concealed bell. This close watch, however, soon came to be as embarrassing to the passenger as to the conductor, by whom the former was apt to be regarded as a 'spotter,' and it seemed to be the general feeling among the patrons of the road, that, being obliged to wear the punch suspended from the neck by a strap was sufficiently humiliating to men of spirit without the additional espionage of every passenger who paid a fare. There is no use denying that much of the so called demoralization of conductors is due to the punch, which, on its leathern strap hung from their necks as a badge of suspicion and distrust. It was not long, at all events, ere the riding public ceased to take any special interest in the matter. Neither was it very long before what are generally known as 'little jokers' began to be used upon the road and the devices manipulated by the 'fly' conductors were as clever as they were numerous. The one most commonly used consisted of

with a tongue attached to a short rod, after the manner of an ordinary call-bell. This device was small enough to be carried in the hand and completely hidden from sight; and as its tone closely resembled that of the company's bell-punch, there was little chance of the detection of a dishonest conductor. It has been no uncommon thing for discharged conductors to 'give the whole snap away;' and while the officers of the road scout the idea of such wholesale stealing under their extensive detective system, the truth is that not infrequently whole coachloads of passengers have been 'rung in' by these little jokers, and every fare has gone into the pocket of the conductor. Soon, bell-punches began to be 'lost;' and, though diligently searched for, the majority never turned up again. It is safe to hazard the opinion that these punches were, 'though lost to sight, to memory dear,' at least so far as regards the officials; to whom the 'shorts' and 'overs' were usually reported; and more than one raid was planned and executed by the street officers of the road, aided by the State detectives, in the vain attempt to capture these stray punches. Yet, all the while, they were roughly reposing in the pockets of such of the boys as felt inclined to take the chances and pay for their use the sum of $5 per week. It has since transpired that most, if not all, the stolen punches found their way into the hands of one man—an ex-conductor—by whom they were let out in this way. Judging from the cut of this 'enterprising' fellow's garments and the pattern of his gold watch and chain, life was to him anything but a burden. Strange as it may seem, though strongly suspected of being crooked, this man was for years retained in the service of the road, he having been so 'foxy' that no points could be made against him sufficiently specific to warrant his arrest. It is needless to remark that the punches thus fraudulently used had been relieved of their perforator, so that all the motions of punching every ticket and ringing on the trip slips for every cash fare could be gone through with by a conductor of nerve with scarcely a chance of detection. The use of the 'little jokers' first mentioned, became, after a while, unpopular because of the annoyance of having to

with one hand closed over the bogus instrument, and other devices for 'beating the punch' were resorted to by those ingeniously and dishonestly inclined. A favorite trick was to fasten a little joker, or gong, inside the vest in such a way as to prevent too much deadening of the sound, and to ring it by means of a string attached to one of the vest buttons—an innocent looking, but very effective, instrument for reducing the dividends of the corporation. Others were attached to the suspender and rung by a bit of cord carefully concealed. And, while the devices were being used by the more cautious and 'fly' of the 'weak-wristed' fraternity, the cars were being 'worked' by another class of conductors—men not of cheek but of unlimited gall, who carried only the 'straight' punch, yet who would sometimes steal more fares in a single trip than those who depended upon the dummies would in a whole day, punching a ticket or a trip slip now and then by way of diverting suspicion, and pocketing the rest without so much as a motion of the punch or the movement of a muscle. These fellows know when to punch and when to take the chances, and can spot a 'spotter' at sight. Get caught? Oh, yes, once in a great while; some one takes a tumble and reports the conductor's number, and a trap is set for him; but even then he don't always walk into it for a long time. The rotation system, though rough on the honest men, is the best move the road has made for a long time. No conductor has a certain car longer than one week at a time, and B is a check upon A, while A is, in turn, a check upon C, whose car he takes. Thus, all over the road, one conductor is a check upon another, and the verse. I have always been, am now, and increase in receipts is said to be very marked. As I said before, it is hard on the honest man, as it destroys all possibility of being regular in either eating or sleeping, while, in many cases, it is a positive hardship, some men being obliged to travel long distances to and from their car, or undergo the expense and inconvenience of frequent removals of their homes. The rotation system is not, I know, quite satisfactory to Mr. Richards, who is, by no means, unmindful of the comfort of his men; yet, because it has

STOPPED A CERTAIN LEAK,

(where conductors and passengers got too well acquainted with each other), he has given orders for its continuance for the present. It looks now as though the days of the bell punch on the Metropolitan road are numbered. In fact, I am told by one who ought to know, that the president has already notified the Buffalo Punch Company that these instruments will not be used much longer. You see the road doesn't own the punches. They are merely leased to the railroad company at so much a year, and I am of the opinion that the rent charged is pretty high. You remember that curious raid on Metropolitan conductors last May, when about 50 were taken into custody, and not a single one of the stolen punches was recovered. To this day the public is in the dark as to who was responsible for the arrest of those conductors. President Richards repudiates the affair, and has more than once sat down pretty hard on Chief Conductor Cox for the hand he took in procuring the warrants. The truth seems to be that the Buffalo Punch Company people, feeling the ground giving way under their feet, put up the job in the desperate hope of being able to capture the stolen punches, either by direct seizure or by inducing some one of the arrested men to confess. Their failure in both these directions is a matter of newspaper record, and, while the cases against the accused men are being continued or postponed from term to term, the bogus punches are busily at work, and the road is being robbed just as though nothing had happened."

Patrons of the Beacon street line have noticed of late, with evident interest, a new and very attractive device, which not only obviates entirely the necessity for encumbering the conductor with the heavy bell punches, but enables every passenger distinctly to see his or her fare registered upon a large dial, and to hear a gong strike every time a fare is paid. All the cars of the Beacon street line have been two in each car; one for registering cash fares and the other for tickets. The register is handsomely gotten up in nickel, with a white face, on which are two dials, each keeping a separate account; one for each half trip, the other being a continuous record of the day's work. The registers are placed in a conspicuous position, and are operated by rods, extending through the entire length of the car. As soon as a conductor takes a fare, he pulls the rod, and the hands on the dial move forward perceptibly, while the gong strikes so distinctly as to be heard in all parts of the car. It is claimed, as an important feature of the system of two dials, that, at any time, a comparison can be made, between the number of passengers on the car and the number of fares recorded.

In the course of an interview with Mr. H. C. Simpson, the agent of the manufacturers, that gentleman stated that the "alarm register" is now in operation on about 60 of the principal horse railroads in the United States. They have been found to work so successfully that in no single instance has their use been discontinued, while the firm is in almost daily receipt of letters of approval. "It will take," added Mr. Simpson, "some months before the change can be effected on all cars of the road, but the trial has been a long and conclusive one, and the action of the Metropolitan is but another indorsement of the device."

In conversation with an officer of the road, yesterday, the statement was made that the increase in receipts since these registers had been in use was very marked. "The habit which many conductors have had," observed the road official, "of averaging up their trips so as to cover up their stealings, is now impossible, as the figures of each and every half trip are taken, and stand for just their actual value." The honest conductor is pleased with the device, as it rids him of the cumbersome and embarrassing bell punch, while the rogues stand dismayed at the prospect before them. The officers of the road, while admitting their inability with any device to compel men to be honest, are satisfied that next year the corporation will receive a larger share of its earnings than ever before.

JAY GOULD'S STEAM YACHT.

A CRAFT OF STEEL AND IRON THAT IS TO BE ONE OF THE LARGEST AND FASTEST AFLOAT.

A Philadelphia despatch says: On Wednesday, Messrs. William Cramp & Sons, the Kensington shipbuilders, were awarded a contract for the construction of a seagoing yacht for Mr. Jay Gould. When completed this yacht will be one of the largest and one of the fastest private boats of the kind in the world. Nearly all the ocean shipbuilders in the country and a number of English firms were competitors for the contract. The size and general model of the craft was decided upon by Mr. Gould, who leaves the details of the construction to the judgment of the Messrs. Cramp. There is an understanding, moreover that no expense is to be spared in adding to the speed and power of the vessel. The building of the yacht is under way. The craft will be of iron and steel, with steel boilers and compound engines of great power. The length of the vessel will be 210 feet, and a depth of 16 feet—larger than the City of Glasgow of the Inman line, which formerly sailed between this city and Liverpool. The interior decorations will be attended to by Mr. Gould himself, and are not alluded to in the contract. The plans for this work will be made as the work upon the vessel itself progresses. The terms of the contract have not been made public, and it is not now possible to give a proper estimate of the cost of the yacht, nor has the name of the vessel been decided upon.

GENERAL SHERMAN ON THE DRAMA.

General Sherman has written a characteristic letter to Manager Ford, of Washington, expressing his regrets that he would not be able to attend a complimentary benefit given that gentleman, Monday evening, in commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of his career as a theatre manager. The letter is dated Headquarters Army of the United States, Washington, D. C., October 19, 1882, and it contains the following passages:

I can and will express to you my great respect and love for those who have labored to keep the drama pure and attractive; who have thereby added to the pleasure and instruction of millions of people, who without expressing it, have been made happy thereby, and whose lives have been made prosperous, generous and refined by the lesson drawn from the stage.

You who stand between the actor and the public have a difficult and delicate part to play to reconcile the claims of rival artists, to detect the change of taste and choice of the public, which one day demands recreation, another must have music, again the good old English comedies, and yet again the profound thoughts of Shakespeare. To me the stage is not only a powerful instructor, but the very best kind of rest in the midst of the cares of life. Seated in an audience, with some well-arranged play, one experiences not only a needed rest, but more—a cheerful mental support, relieving the mind and resting the mind far more than reading or even social conpropose to be, a great friend of the drama, a friend of those who play upon the stage and a friend of the managers, who bear the burden of preparation and arrangement.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Lewiston Journal says: Pumpkins are scarce in this immediate vicinity, but they seem to be plenty in the country.

Cumberland.

The matter of the wages of longshoremen who are to be employed in loading and unloading the English steamers, at Portland, this winter, is attracting considerable attention. It is settled that the Allan and Dominion steamers will run to Portland, and of course, last season the men who worked on the English steamers received twenty-five cents an hour for day work and thirty cents an hour for night work. Those prices were cheerfully paid by the stevedores. This season the longshoremen voted to fix their prices five cents an hour higher for both day and night work. The Portland men say squarely that they cannot work for less than the rates mentioned above. They will not interfere in any way with foreigners, if they are brought here for less wages. If the steamers do not furnish work for them at the prices demanded, they will do whatever other work comes in their way and find no fault.

Franklin.

Mr. Small, of Madrid, an aged gentleman, dropped dead in prayer meeting, Wednesday evening, Oct. 13.

Kennebec.

The Mail tells a sad story of a Frenchman, Mr. King, poor, old and forlorn, whose only friend was a little dog, which the hardly sane old man loved very dearly. Naughty Waterville boys insulted the master and teased his dog, to cause the old man to fly into a rage. In one of these affairs, Mr. King rushed at his tormentors, and the little dog went to his friend's aid, and slightly bit one of his aggressors. The dog was killed because his master could not pay ten dollars fine, and now his unhappy master weeps and laments for the loss of his only comfort. It is strange that children will thus annoy the unfortunate.

Oxford.

A day or two ago as a drove of cattle, numbering about forty, belonging to Mr. Hill, of East Dixfield, were crossing over the Sandy river, at Madrid village, the bridge gave way, precipitating all but two of the drove into the river. The strange part of the incident is that none of the cattle were in the least injured, and being in deep water, were so frightened that they could not be induced to make a break for the shore until one had been seized by the horns and literally pulled ashore.

Sagadahoc.

The Telegraph says that the boy run over on the Topsham track, Thursday of last week, was a son of Mr. Thomas Rogers, of Topsham, aged ten years, and was but slightly injured.

Post Sedgwick, of Bath, proposes to hold a Fair, if possible, at the Patten Car Works, and make it one of the grandest turnouts it was ever the good fortune of Bath to behold.

The First Christian Church at Lubec, the tall building on the hill, is being repaired at a cost of ten to twelve hundred dollars.

Bears are reported numerous and very troublesome throughout the county.

THE GEOLOGY OF AMERICA.

The report of the Director of the Geological Survey for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1882, is now nearly complete. Experiments have been made under the management of the former director, Clarence King, on the various phenomena connected with rock formation. An examination (chiefly in the laboratory) has been made of the structural geology of the Eureka mining district of Colorado, of the volcanic rocks of the Great Basin, and of Mounts Shasta, Hood and Rainier. Another department of the work has been the study of certain lake basins in Utah, Nevada and California. These lakes are now mostly extinct, Great Salt Lake being one of the few exceptions, and their history, which is now being studied, indicates a study of the quaternary climate, which leads in turn to the study of the climate of the arid portion of the United States.

Another field of investigation has been the study of glacial formations extending from the Atlantic coast to the middle portion of the great plains in Northern latitudes. This investigation also is a research relating to quaternary climate and to the character and origin of the present topographic features of the area involved. Investigations have also been conducted relating to the economic geology of the Ten Mile district, Summit Colorado, and of the basaltic mesas at Golden, which will be extended to cover the entire Denver coal basin. Much time has been spent in the preparation of a report on the Leadville district. In Nevada, the Eureka district has been carefully surveyed and a report has been prepared on the Comstock lode and the Washoe district.

The director says all of the investigations in economic geology will have a practical value in determining the characteristics of ore deposits, and will advance mining industries by pointing out the best methods of systematic development. Early in the fiscal year geographical work was begun in New Mexico and Arizona which is preliminary to a geological examination of the country.

In conclusion Major Powell says that the survey has been engaged during a great part of the year in the preparation of statistics relative to the mining industries of the United States, which are complete and exhaustive in every respect, which are intended for the use of the Census Bureau.

6 Per Cent Gold Bonds.
TOPEKA, SALINA & WESTERN RAILROAD CO, OF KANSAS.

This Company was organized for the purpose of giving railroad facilities to the people of Shawnee, Wabaunsee, Morris, Dickinson, Salina, Lincoln and Osborne counties, and is to run from Topeka, southwesterly and westerly as above indicated, to Beloit, near the eastern line of Osborne county, a distance of 161 miles, passing through that remarkable territory known as the "Great Wheat Belt of Kansas." This particular territory has been, and now is, without adequate railroad convenience, there being from 15 to 30 miles on each side of this proposed line unincumbered by any railroad, notwithstanding the population of the eight counties through which it passes, numbered in 1881 one hundred and twenty-five thousand souls, and every acre of land susceptible of the highest cultivation.

The Company will issue $16 per cent forty-year bonds, PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD, in the city of Boston, at the rate of $20,000 per mile, and will issue its stock at the rate of $15,000 per mile; these said securities to be delivered to the contractor on the completion of the road in sections of ten miles each; said completion, according to specified requirements, to be certified to by the Chief Engineer of the Company before the delivery of the bonds and stock for such ten miles.

The work of construction is progressing rapidly, and it is estimated that by the first of December the road bed will be completed 40 miles west of the city of Topeka, to the town of Alma.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to these bonds may be made at the office of the contractor on the following terms:

For $250, twelve shares of stock (par value $25 each) and a $1000 bond will be given, the latter bearing interest at six per cent. from the date of sale.

This price will be advanced from time to time as the building of the road progresses, or within the discretion of the contractor.

Full particulars will be cheerfully given to those who may call at the office, or any inquiry by mail will be promptly answered.

BOUTELLE & BURR, PROPRIETORS.

C. A. BOUTELLE, EDITOR.

All business letters should be addressed to Boutelle & Burr, and communications intended for publication should be addressed: "Editor of Whig and Courier."

TUESDAY, OCT. 24, 1882.

The exportation of wheat and provisions is considerably larger than last year. The amount of wheat exported in September, 1882, was 17,159,343 bushels. Amount in September, 1881, was 10,970,393 bushels.

An exchange says: Hall & Sampson, of Joliet, lost the key to their safe, and all the skilled mechanics of the city, after three days' work, gave it up unopened. Then a couple of burglars were called from the penitentiary, and in 28 minutes they had the safe unlocked.

The value of a very few votes was significantly illustrated in several Ohio districts. In the Seventh District, Morey, Republican, is elected by forty-one majority; Hart, Republican, in the Eleventh District, is defeated by only three votes, as reported, and McKinley, Republican, in the Eighteenth District, is chosen by a majority of only eight.

The Concord, N. H. Monitor says: The attempt of the Democratic party in this State to assume a Saul of Tarsus role in the matter of purity of elections is a most ridiculous fiasco. The people have not forgotten the last "bar'l and beer" campaign of that party, when greenbacks in the hands of the managers were more numerous than Democratic voters.

An interesting experiment in heliography or signalling by sunshine was successfully made in Egypt during the recent campaign. Colonel Keyser ascended one of the pyramids near Cairo, and by means of a heliographic mirror reflected a ray of sunlight to Alexandria, 120 miles away. At that great distance the signals, appearing like pin-points of brightness were easily ascertained to be a message from Sir Garnet Wolseley to the Khedive.

Philadelphia has night schools for working women. In which the studies are divided as follows: Those which every woman needs for herself, such as reading, writing and arithmetic, physiology and hygiene, sewing and cutting and fitting; those which contribute to her enjoyment of her leisure, such as French, German, history and literature; and such as contribute to her power of improving her home life, viz., cooking, reading aloud and singing. The teachers are competent volunteers.

The Senatorial deadlock in the Oregon Legislature was broken Friday night, just before the close of the session, by the election of John M. Dolph, a law partner of Mitchell, the leading candidate for the place. Dolph is said to be a native a Missouri, but for a score of years a resident of Oregon, where he has held the offices of State Senator and U. S. District Attorney. He has always been a consistent Republican. He is a man of large wealth, and is regarded as one of the most eloquent speakers in the State. He is grand Master of Masons and of Odd Fellows, and is Vice President of the Oregon and Transcontinental Railway Company.

The art of shorthand is, it appears, to be superseded by one of the queerest inventions on record. The revolution is to be effected by means of a machine called a "glossograph," consisting of six levers, forming a sort of cage, each communicating with a tracing pencil. The use to be made of the "glossograph" is rather curious. While the orator or lecturer is holding forth, the reporter is to repeat the words of the speaker with his tongue in the cage. Thus the quickest conversation, some London journals tell us, may be taken down with ease. The ludicrous aspect which this new invention assumes may be an obstacle to its adoption.

The question of reduction of postage will probably come up for discussion in the next Congress, and there will be a dispute as to whether the rates should be lessened on newspapers or letters. Postmaster General Howe, it is said, is at present inclined not to recommend any reduction in letter postage, preferring not to interfere with the present excellent financial basis of the department. He is of opinion that it would be better to decrease the rate on newspapers, believing that the demand for that is greater. Congress, on the other hand, judging from its attitude at the last session is rather inclined to reduce the postage on letters. A reduction in either direction would be gratefully received by the people and would no doubt result in a sufficient increase of the particular mail matter favored to bring the revenue therefrom up to its present amount.—Providence Press.

There has been a rumor afloat in Washington that Postmaster General Howe will soon retire from the Cabinet. Although the rumor could be traced to no authentic source it has created considerable comment and given rise to many speculations as to what cause might lead Mr. Howe to resign his office. Chief among the speculations indulged in was one to the effect that the Postmaster General was jealous of the confidential relations existing between First Assistant Postmaster General Hatton and the President. In conversation with a Tribune correspondent on Saturday First Assistant Postmaster General Hatton said: "The report that Mr. Howe has any intention of resigning is absurd. He is busily engaged in the preparation of his annual report and I don't believe that he has the remotest intention of retiring from the Cabinet. As for any jealousy in the Department, such a thing does not exist.

The Hon. W. C. DePauw, of New Albany, Ind., who proposes to give at once $300,000 to Asbury University, and 45 per cent of his estate after death, on condition that the citizens of that vicinity shall furnish suitable grounds for the institution and subscribe a fund of $150,000, is emphatically a Hoosier of the Hoosiers. Born in Indiana, of French descent, in 1822, and left a penniless orphan at the age of sixteen; he has worked his way up to the very foremost rank among the business men of that State. He has been a mill owner, a merchant, a banker and a grain dealer, and is now interested in developing the plate glass industry. He has always been ready to use freely his wealth and influence for the good of his native State, and particularly his home city, New Albany. He has helped many young men to obtain an education, has founded and maintained a large seminary, for young ladies, and now, by his offer to Asbury University, has connected his name permanently and prominently with the highest educational interests of the West.

TWO DISTINGUISHED SPEAKERS.

An Enthusiastic Meeting.

The first Republican Rally for this campaign in this city was a grand success. The weather looked so unpropitious that it seemed that not many would venture out. Not so; there was a large audience and they staid with unabated interest, until 10.40, which was certainly very complimentary to the speakers' ability and oratory and interest in the subject. Our Democratic fellow-citizens thought to divert attention and keep people away, but their serenading brought more in than it kept out.

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by Mayor Murphy, and the following officers were announced and took their seats on the platform:

President, Dr. Levi G. Hill.

Vice Presidents, John Holland, Ralph Hough, John H. Hurd, A. H. Quint, James Thurston, James E. Lothrop, Chas. H. Horton, E. V. Brewster, J. Colby Caverly, A. H. Young, Oliver Wyatt, Chas. H. Sawyer, T. P. Cressey, John Scales, Thos. C. Hovey and John W. Place.

Secretaries, J. A. Rines, W. W. Cushman, George E. Varney.

Dr. Levi G. Hill in a short and appropriate speech introduced the first speaker, our U. S. Senator, H. W. Blair, who spoke about three quarters of an hour and delivered a good waking up speech. He spoke of the danger that confronts us in this campaign, and that is apathy; he had no doubt the election will go all right for the Republican party; it is important that it should, for the Bourbons of the South will not hesitate to use their old fraudulent methods to send Democrats to Congress, and New Hampshire must send two good Republicans to counteract so far as may be, the fraudulent Democracy. He spoke of Ohio, and said that the Democratic victory would arouse the Republicans to victory in New Hampshire and every other State just as the Republican defeat in Maine did in 1880. We all know how jubilant the Democrats were over Maine then, and how scared the Republicans were and yet it gave the Republicans one of the biggest victories they ever had; so will it be with the Ohio scare.

Senator Blair set forth the great importance of this election to New Hampshire Republicans; two United States Senators and two members of Congress from this State may make a vast difference in changing the complexion of the House or of the Senate. He spoke of the good work the Republican party had done in the past, and said it is a progressive party and will go forward and meet the new questions of the future in the same liberal manner it has managed so successfully the great questions of the past. He spoke at considerable length in regard to the tariff and the course the Democrats pursued in Congress. He gave illustrations showing what protection had done and how it affects favorably the great industries of New Hampshire. Senator Blair made a good solid speech and sat down amid the cheers of the audience.

The Hon. C. A. Boutelle, of Maine, was next introduced. At this time the Democrats outside were just closing up the flag raising and screeching, and quite a lot came into the hall; Mr. Boutelle made a most happy introductory hit by saying he was glad the Democrats had been engaged in flag-raising; it shows great progress for he could remember when they would not be seen raising the old stars and stripes. He said that some people make pretence that this election is of not so much importance as some others have been; that is a mistake, every election is important for on its result depends whether we have a good government or a bad one.

Mr. Boutelle then examined in a masterly manner the character of the Democratic party, for he said we should always examine the character and qualifications of those who apply for important positions.

Mr. Boutelle compared the financial record of the two parties in their management of the government. He showed how the Democratic party left the government; how that the Republican party had come through successfully the enormous financial transactions which have involved thousands of millions of dollars; that the vast debt at close of the war had been gradually decreased; the interest on the debt had been made smaller and smaller and the credit of the government had increased so that now the U. S. 4 per cent. bonds sell at 128, and the 3 per cent. are at a premium. All of which shows that the Republican party has been a successful manager of the financial interests of the people.

Mr. Boutelle handled the tariff question in a style that was second only to the Hon. Wm. P. Frye discussion of that subject in the City Hall in the campaign of 1880. It was masterly and unanswerable. He explained the connection of the tariff with the old slave holding government in the South, where the slave holders favored free trade because they cared nothing for the common people, the poor white trash and the slaves. The tariff has been of unmeasurable benefit to the industries and prosperity of the people. He cited a large number of manufactures to prove his position.

Mr. Boutelle's speech was grand and powerful and his repartee to the meddlesome Democrats who interrupted him was richly enjoyed by the audience. When that gentlemen speaks again in the City Hall, he can rest assured that the hall will be crowded full, hot even a storm of Democratic pitchforks could keep the people away.

PERSONAL.

United States Senator Blair returned to Concord on the early morning train. Capt. C. A. Boutelle, Congressman-elect of Maine, whose powerful speech in the City Hall last evening has had a perceptibly depressing effect upon the "unterrified," who have moved about all day long, with faces as long as your arm, is still in the city enjoying the generous hospitalities of Mr. Geo. B. Gilbert, whose ability to entertain, many emulate and but few can imitate. This morning he invited the Maine orator to a ride behind his lively stepper, 'Belle of Hudson. Many local points of interest were visited, chief among them being Garrison Hill, from whose summit our guest gazed in rapt admiration at the almost endless variety of landscape scenery stretched before him. This afternoon, on invitation of Col. Samuel C. Fisher, Capt. Boutelle, Geo. H. Gilbert, and Col. Young drove behind Col. Fisher's span of fleet steppers, to Portsmouth, where the party are to be entertained by Naval Constructor Bush, Wm. H. Hackett, and others, with a dinner at the Rockingham House.

A LETTER FROM MR. BLAINE.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 20, 1882.

RICHARD HARRINGTON, Esq., Chairman Republican State Committee:

Dear Sir:—It is with extreme regret that I find myself unable to fulfill my long standing engagement to speak in Delaware. Some three weeks since I had a severe attack of malarial fever, and it have not sufficiently regained my strength to warrant me in attempting a public speech. My physician forbids it positively and enjoins rest and quiet.

I have personal reasons for coming to Delaware aside from the good I might hope to do the Republican cause, and I shall not be content until I have had an opportunity in person to thank the good friends in your State who have manifested, on important occasions, their trust and confidence in me.

That Delaware should sustain the Democratic party seems altogether anomalous. Her geographical position, her industries, her progress in manufactures would all seem to ally her strongly with the Republican party. During the period in which Republican Administrations have shaped the financial and economic policies of the country, Delaware has enjoyed a new industrial life and has shown a remarkable development in wealth and productive power. During the very years that Delaware has been reaping the richest advantage of the Protective system she has been represented in Congress by the enemies of that system.

For the remainder of this campaign, Republicans everywhere should bend their energies to securing a majority in the next House of Representatives. Whatever causes of just discontent may exist with State nominations unfairly and injuriously thrust upon the party, and whatever means may be taken to resent such wrongs and repel such indignities, it is evidently the duty of all true Republicans to use every honorable effort to hold control of the popular branch of Congress. To that branch is lodged the power to originate Revenue bills, and that carries with it the incidental power of fostering or disabling the entire industrial system of the country. The Republicans may be safely trusted to do the first. There is serious danger that the Democrats might do the second.

I am very truly yours,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Hon. Washington Long, an influential and much respected citizen of Fort Fairfield, died Saturday morning at his residence in that village, aged about 70 years. Mr. Long went to Aroostook between 30 and 40 years ago from Oxford county, where he became a quite prominent lumberman. He was one of the founders of the Republican party, was a member of the Executive Council, the candidate for Senator on the first regular Republican ticket in Aroostook county, was presented for the Congressional nomination in 1856 by Aroostook county, and after the election of President Lincoln was made Collector of the port of Eastport, an office he held until about 1870. He supported Mr. Greeley for President in 1872. Returning to Fort Fairfield he again took up an interest in the business of the town, having just completed a large block of buildings in which there is a fine public hall. Of late Mr. Long has acted with the Greenback party, and was a member of the Legislature in 1880. Mr. Long was an uncle of Gov. Long, of Massachusetts.

Mechanics in the woolen mills of Massachusetts received $8 90 per week under the low tariff of 1860. They receive $13.50 under protection in 1882. And protection of American industry has thus increased wages all over the land.

A Brave Man's Lament.

General Rawlings was one of the noblest men the war produced—one whose memory will ever remain one of its tenderest legacies. His last words were: "I know I am to die, and my only regret is that I leave my family paupers." This will meet the eye of some man—of many men—who, but for a determined resolve to seek Life Insurance, will at last come to the despair which Rawlings felt. We do not believe in frightening men into insurance—to talk about dying beds being curtained with remorse, &c., &c., but the truth may as well be told that, often,

"Evil is wrought by want of thought,
As well as want of heart."

A TRAIN RUNNING WILD.

The Engineer Fatally Burned

NEW YORK, Oct 23. By some disarrangement of machinery the steam and fires of a locomotive on a train from this city for Philadelphia, yesterday afternoon were driven on to Engineer Reig, horribly burning him and driving him from the engine back to the passenger car. The tender was set on fire and the train was dashing along without control. A passenger named Steele rushed through the flames and succeeded in putting on a brake, stopping the train. The passengers put out the fire and the engineer was found in a dying condition in the water tank of the tender. He will probably die as the flesh is burned off from various parts of his body. Steele was also terribly burned. There were 620 passengers on the train and the heroism of the engineer and of Steele undoubtedly prevented a terrible calamity.

SPORTING MATTERS

A Scull Race.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 23. A boat race between Geo. Gaisel, of New York, and Wm. Elliott, ex champion of England, took place on the Passaic river this afternoon. The course was three miles with turn. At the start the men were even, but at the half mile Gaisel drew ahead and turned the stake some distance in advance. Coming back Gaisel apparently played with Elliott, and won easily by several lengths No official time given.

THE ARCTIC REGION

Arrival of Lieut. Powell Home—Lieut Putnam's Body Seen.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23. Lieut. Powell and party have just arrived on the schooner Leo from Point Barrow. He found Lieut Ray and men in excellent condition and only one man unfit for duty. Lieut. Powell, however, left three men. He thinks the data collected from there will be of vast importance. While at St. Lawrence Bay a native told Powell that after the U S steamer Rodgers' crew left on the North Star, a heavy northeast wind prevailed at where the Rodgers was burned and drove an ice plough ashore on which was a body very black and much swollen and without doubt was that of Lieut Putnam. The natives had intended bringing the body ashore, but another gale springing up from the opposite direction took it to sea. Natives had told Lieut. Healey, of the United States steamer Corwin, of this before the Leo arrived and Lieut. Healey was then looking in that locality in hopes of finding the floe yet intact. Lieut Powell says there is no doubt in the minds of the people of that vicinity of its being Lieut Putnam's body. Corwin will not reach here until about December.

THE LANDING OF PENN.

Celebrating the 200th Anniversary.

CHESTER, Pa., Oct. 23. The bi-centennial celebration at Chester to-day is a grand success. Every building is resplendent with flags, bunting and various appropriate decorations, giving the city a holiday appearance. Numerous workshops and industrial shops are closed and crowds are pouring into the city by every train, at least 200,000 visitors being present. The streets are so thronged that it is impossible to pass along. Among the guests present were a large number of distinguished gentlemen, including Governor Hoyt and the Attorney General, the Mayors of the cities in this State, Delaware and Jersey, and a large number of representative gentlemen from Philadelphia and New York. The day was ushered in by all the bells in the city tolling two hundred strokes and since midnight all has been commotion and stir. The exercises proper of the day began at 9 30 A. M., with a representation of the landing of Wm. Penn and his party from an old fashioned boat at the foot of Penn street, the exact spot where Penn first landed in this State 200 years ago.

As the Boat

touched the shore Penn and his party landed and were greeted by Mackham, Wade and Piersons and a long talk ensued. When Penn landed a large fleet of of all kinds of vessels, lying in the river, blew whistles, thousands of people on shore applauded, bells throughout the city rang and all was excitement. At 11.30 A. M, a meeting was organized at the grand stand at Second and Concord avenue, where 15,000 people were assembled. On the grand stand were a number of representative men. The meeting was called to order by Mayor Barton, who made a few remarks congratulating the people on the importance of the occasion.

What with Crowded Streets.

magnificent decorations that line them, and general bustle to-day, it seemed more like one of the great days of the centennial celebration than merely the celebration proper. The only exercises that took place in that connection were a historical address, delivered to-night before the Pennsylvania Historical Society and a monster serenade by the German singing societies in front of Independence Hall to-night. At midnight the ceremonies proper were inaugurated by the ringing of the State House bell, 200 strokes, typical of the 200th anniversary that is celebrated this week, the church chimes about the city taking up the peals.

NEW YORK.

Will Not Accept.

WATERTOWN, Oct. 23 Congressman Flower to-day received a despatch from Chairman Cooper, of the Democratic State Executive Committee, strongly urging him in the interest of the party to reconsider his declination of a renomination. Mr. Flower telegraphed a reply peremptorily refusing to run, and concluding thus, "There is no lack of available candidates and if the people or their representatives are allowed to get together in convention and ballot for candidates instead of being driven into something fixed up for them in committee they will undoubtedly make a good nomination and elect the choice of the convention Give the people a chance to name their choice; you know they seldom have one."

A Motion Denied.

Judge Lawrence, to-day, denied the motion to dismiss the complaint in the suit brought by the people of the State against the Metropolitan Telephone and Telegraph Company to compel the removal by the company of wires in 21st street, between 5th and 6th avenues, and to award damages resulting from the maintenance of the structure for a year or more.

Concerning Ireland.

A Riot in Lyons.

LYONS, Oct. 23. A riotous demonstration occurred against the municipality here yesterday in consequence of their having suppressed the subvention to the opera. The police were unable to cope with the crowd. A body of gendarmes cleared the streets. The French Tunisian Treaty.

LONDON, Oct. 23. The Times' correspondent says the Government has resuscitated the treaty concluded between the Bey of Tunis and M. Freycinet. It will be submitted to the Chambers for ratification. The powers practically approve the treaty by which France undertakes to redeem the Tunisian debt. The immediate consequence of the transfer of the debt will be the abolition of the commission charged with the supervision of the Tunisian revenue treaty; it also stipulates that France shall have the right to send before a French tribunal, to be established in Tunis, all cases of litigation. The treaty provided the Bey with a civil list of $28,000 yearly and with £52,000 yearly as a future allowance to the Princess.

MANCHESTER, Oct. 23. Ex-Gov. E. A. Straw died at his residence in this city tonight, aged sixty-three years. The disease was of the brain and for some time his mental faculties have been impaired. MINGLING SAVAGE BEASTS.

THE FEAT ACCOMPLISHED AT WATTS' ROYAL MENAGERIE.

While the general public wandered through the upper rooms at Watts' Royal Menagerie in Boston, Friday, there was enacted underneath a scene the like of which was probably never before witnessed. By invitation of Mr. Watts, representatives of the daily press assembled at the menagerie to witness the "mixing up" of the occupants of three separate cages—a lion, leopard and two hyenas—in one large cage, and the endeavor of Prof. Oliver Cole to prove that their natures are not incompatible. It was with some trepidation that the scribes saw the only means of exit locked, but as the key was inside and within easy reach, they were reassured and turned their attention to the show. A cage about 20 feet long, and proportionately wide and high, was separated into three compartments by strong movable gratings. The king of beasts lay quietly in the further compartment, the cowardly and repulsive hyenas crouched in the cage nearest the door, while the treacherous leopard, which, only a few days ago, bit clear through Prof. Cole's left hand, occupied the middle compartment. The professor entered the middle cage, whip in hand, and quickly slammed the door. He first swung back the partition that separated the lion and leopard, and the animals were together, greeting each other and Prof. Cole with characteristic growls. The leopard crouched in the corner opposite the lion, and both gave vent to their rage in horrible growls and snarls. The leopard had not forgotten the previous conflict with the professor, and both beasts were maddened by the smell of blood on the unhealed wound in his hand. When the second partition was removed the sight was frightful. The hyenas, finding no barrier separating them from their companions in captivity, slunk into a corner and pressed hard against each other and against the bars, as if to slink out of sight. When the lion and the leopard in fury bounded to where the cowards were, the hyenas ran up and down the length of the cage. The cries that issued from all the animals was blood-curdling, and the building was shaken by the frantic efforts of the enraged animals to escape, and the other animals in the room started up affrighted. The leopard's eyes were balls of fire; the lion stood up boldly, with jaws extended, and roared defiance to the man who stood cool and calm amid the turmoil. The hyenas were glad to lie in a heap, unnoticed. Prof. Cole soon restored order without the use of anything but a whip, which he finally laid down on the floor of the cage, and then coolly smoked a cigar. No blood was shed, and the triumph was complete; man's nerve and intelligence had compelled the submission of incongruous brutes. The feat accomplished by Prof. Cole has been attempted by many lion tamers, but without success. Previous to Friday, the mingling of beasts of such contrary natures has resulted in the killing of the weaker by the stronger. Prof. Cole was heartily applauded, at the conclusion of the act, and subsequently the public was given an opportunity to witness a repetition of the show.

THE BOWDOIN HAZING CASE. The case, which was on trial in Portland last week, of Charles A. Strout against seven Bowdoin students for an injury inflicted on the plaintiff's eye while a member of the freshman class has reached a verdict. The case was given to the jury Friday night at 5 30 o'clock. The jury were out all night unable to agree, standing eleven to one in favor of a verdict for the plaintiff. Saturday morning the jury came in and asked for further instructions from the judge. A portion of the testimony was read and the judge satisfied the objections of the dissenting juryman. The jury again retired and in a short time brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $2,500 damages. The counsel for the defendants immediately filed exceptions and a motion in arrest of judgment.

SHOT HIMSELF. Benjamin F. Lowell, belonging to Wilton, went to Boston two days ago with his wife, and secured lodgings. While Mrs. Lowell was out posting a letter, about 6 o'clock Sunday evening, says the Herald, her husband shot himself in the heart with a revolver, in his room, and died instantly. The deceased was 43 years of age. For a long time he was a conductor on a South Boston horse car, and left that occupation to travel for a carriage manufacturer. While in Maine, looking up a trade last summer, he got a sunstroke, and ever since has been ailing. His wife tried every remedy for him, but could not succeed in getting his health restored. Finally they went to Boston to consult physicians. Persons in the house, where the suicide occurred, heard the report of the pistol, but did not realize that it had gone off in the house. About 10 minutes afterward Mrs. Lowell returned, and some one passing her room found her bending, grief stricken, over the corpse of her husband. Medical Examiner Draper was notified, but deemed an inquest unnecessary.

OBITUARY.

Rev. Father Clement Mutsears.

Our telegraphic columns yesterday morning briefly chronicled the decease at Great Falls, N. H., on Sunday night, of Rev. Father Clement Mutsears. The announcement was received in this community with much sorrow, as here several years of his early ministrations were passed and he was beloved and respected by our people generally.

The deceased was born in Brussels, Belgium, in February, 1834, and accordingly was in his forty-ninth year at the time of his demise. He was a member of the Franciscans of the Order of St. Francis. After coming to this country he resided first in New York and subsequently assumed the position of Assistant Priest in Lewiston. In 1869 he came to Bangor and accepted the position of pastor of St. John's Catholic church. Father Mutsears remained in our city until 1874, and during his stay endeared himself very strongly not only to his parishioners but all citizens with whom he became acquainted.

After leaving Bangor he became pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church in Lewiston and from there went to Great Falls, N. H., and was pastor of the St. Mary's Catholic church in that thriving manufacturing centre, when death came, bringing his labors to a close. Father Mutsears was a man of learning and ability and brought to the discharge of his duties great zeal and earnestness.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

HER MOTHER'S SECRET.

BY MRS SOUTHWORTH,

AUTHOR OF "THE HIDDEN HAND," "THE UNLOVED WIFE," ETC., ETC., ETC.

CHAPTER I.

THE MISTRESS OF MONDREER.

There is a wound within her—'tis a wound
That lies too deep for tears, and many a while,
When all that is around her seems to smile,
Within her heart of heart a knell doth sound.
—Isaac Williams.

"Mother! Oh, mother! it will break my heart!" wailed Odalite, sinking at the lady's feet, and dropping her head into her hands, face downward to the carpet.

The lady gently raised her child, took her in her arms and tenderly caressed her, murmuring softly.

"No, my own! hearts never break, or one heart, I know, must have broken long ago. Besides," she added, in a firmer tone—"Honor must be saved, though hearts be sacrificed."

"'Honor,' mother, dear? I do not understand. I do not see what honor has to do with it. Or if it has I should think that honor would be better saved by my keeping faith with Le than by breaking with him. Oh, mother! mother! It will kill me!" moaned Odalite.

"My child, my dear girl, hear me! listen to reason! Leonidas Force has no claim to be remembered by you. You have never been engaged to him. You were but a little girl of thirteen when he went to sea on his first voyage, three years ago, and you have not seen him since. What possible claim can he have upon you, since no betrothal exists between you?" gently questioned the lady, tenderly running her fair fingers through the dark tresses of the young head that leaned upon her bosom.

"Oh, mother," replied the girl, with a heavy sigh, "I know that there was no formal betrothal between Le and myself—but—but—we all knew, you and father and Le and I—all knew—and always knew, that we two belonged to each other and would always belong to each other all our lives. Le and I never thought of any other fate."

"Idle childish fancies, my poor little girl! too trivial to cause you these tears. Wipe them away, and look clearly at the higher destiny more worthy of your birth and beauty," murmured the lady, pressing her ripe, red lips upon the pale brow of her darling.

"Oh, mother! I do not want a higher destiny! I do not want any destiny apart from Le. And these are not childish fancies, and not trivial to me! Oh, think, mother, Le and I were playmates as far back in my life as I can remember. We loved each other better than we loved any one else in the whole world. You and father used to laugh at us and pretend to be jealous, but we saw that you were pleased all the time for you both intended us for each other, and we knew it, too, for father used to say when he saw how inseparable we two were 'So much the better, I hope their hearts will not be estranged when they grow up.' And our hearts have never become estranged from each other!"

"Oh, yes, dearest, I know that there was some speculative talk when you were children of uniting you and Leonidas, so that the name of Force might not die out from Mondreer. But I never really approved of marrying cousins, Odalite, merely to keep the family name on the family estate."

"But, mother darling, Le and I never thought of the family name and estate, we only thought of one another. And besides, we are such very, very distant cousins—only fourth or fifth, I think—that that objection could never be raised. Oh, mother! dear, mother! do not compel me to break with Le! I can not! I can not! Oh, indeed, I cannot!" she cried, burying her face in the lady's bosom.

Elfrida Force caressed her daughter in silence.

Presently Odalite lifted her head and pleaded:

"He is coming home so soon now, and so full of hope. He expects to be here by Christmas, and he expects—oh, yes, I know by his last letter that he expects to —to—to—" The girl's eyes fell under the compassionate yet scrutinizing gaze of her mother, and her voice faltered into silence.

"To marry you early in the new year, I suppose you mean, dear."

"Yes, mother."

"He did not say so."

"No, mother, dear, Le did not say so, in so many words, but from the whole tone of his letter he evidently meant so. Father thought he did, and even tried to tease me about the New Year's wedding—asking me how many hundreds I should need to buy my wedding clothes."

"What is it he said in his letter that leads you to suppose he has any such expectations? I confess that I saw nothing of such an intention when I read the letter."

"Only this, mother but it was very significant. He wrote that now he had inherited Greenbushes and all his aunt Laura's money, he was rich enough to resign from the Navy and he need not go to sea any more, nor ever part with me again, but that he should stay at home, repair and refurnish the house, improve the land, and farm it on all the new principles, and make the place a paradise for us to live in! He wrote, mother, dear, as of certain fixed facts."

"He was very presumptuous, my dear little girl, for there is nothing certain in this world of changes," gravely commented the lady.

"But Le's heart has not changed, nor has mine."

"My poor darling," said Elfrida Force smoothing her daughter's dark hair with a gentle hand, "my precious child! It grieves me to do so, but I must prepare you for what seems inevitable. You must forget all this youthful folly, and think of Leonidas Force only as a cousin. You do not really love him as a betrothed maiden should love her affianced husband. You only fancy that you do. In reality you know nothing of such a love as that. Le was brought up in the house with you. You have no brother. Le has no sister. You therefore love each other as brother and sister. By and by you both may discover—but not for each other—the higher, deeper, stronger love which unites the husband and the wife in a true marriage—such a love as I would wish might crown my darling's life with lasting joy—such a love as you might find in a union with Angus Anglesea, if you would, but give him the opportunity of winning your heart."

"Madam!" exclaimed the girl, starting to her feet, and gathering her black brows over black eyes that blazed with indignation, "I hate Colonel Anglesea! I hate him and I fear him! And I would rather die this day and never behold the face of Le again, than listen to Colonel Anglesea!"

"Odalite! Odalite, my child! You are talking to your mother. Come to my heart again, and calm your excitement," said the lady, holding out her arms.

And the young girl fell weeping upon the bosom of her mother.

The lady allowed some time to pass in which the girl's paroxysm of tears exhausted itself, and then caressing her gently, she began, in a soothing tone.

"My precious child, do you doubt your mother's love or truth?"

"Oh, no, no, no! How could you ask such a question of your own child, mother?" earnestly protested Odalite.

"Do you doubt that duty is to be held above all other considerations?"

"No! Oh, no!"

"Well, then, I have something to tell you, my darling, which will make you forget all selfish aims and even also the wishes of your old playmate. Come with me to your own bed-chamber, where we shall be most secure from all interruption. I will tell you of a fatal episode in my own youth, when I was younger even than you are now. Oh, that I should have to tell such a tale to my daughter! But, Odalite, when you have heard it you will learn just what you have to do in order to save us all, and especially to save your noble, generous, honorable father from ruin and disgrace. And then, Odalite, when you have learned all, you shall do exactly as you please. Not one word of coercion, not another word of persuasion, will I utter. I will leave your fate in your hands, and you shall be absolutely free to act. Come with me now."

She took her daughter's arm and they arose from the sofa.

For a moment they stood, quite accidentally, facing a tall mirror between two windows on the opposite side of the room, and that mirror for the moment reflected two beautiful forms, of which it would be difficult to decide which should bear off the palm for beauty.

The elder lady, Elfrida Force—wife of Abel Force, the owner of Mondreer, one of the finest old places on the western shore of Maryland—was a tall, stately blonde, with a superbly rounded form, a rich complexion, and an affluence of golden brown hair, rippling all over her fine head, and gathered into a mass at the nape of her graceful neck. She wore an inexpensive, closely fitting dress of dark blue serge, whose very plainness set off the perfection of her figure and enhanced the brilliancy of her complexion, showing to the best advantage that splendid beauty, which at the age of thirty-five had reached its zenith. Just now, however, the vivid brightness of her bloom had faded to a pale rose tint, and her lovely blue eyes seemed heavy with unshed tears.

Her young daughter, Odalite, equally beautiful in her way, was yet of an entirely opposite type. She was of medium height, and her form, though well rounded, was slender almost to fragility. Her head was small, and covered with a fine suit of rippling jet black hair, which she wore carelessly, partly in a black net, partly escaping down the shoulders. Her eyes and eyebrows were black as jet; her features were delicate and regular, and her complexion was of a clear ivory white. She wore a crimson merino dress, plainly made, closely fitting, and relieved only by narrow white ruffles at throat and wrists.

Only for a moment they paused, and then they walked out of the room, and the pretty picture disappeared.

They went to Odalite's chamber, where, in privacy, the proud lady could tell the daughter HER MOTHER'S SECRET—a secret so terrible that she believed it would compel the poor girl to give up her young dream of happiness with her chosen lover, Leonidas Force, whom she idolized, and accept a life of misery as the wife of Colonel Angus Anglesea, a heartless adventurer, whom she loathed. The above we publish as a specimen chapter, but the continuation of this story will be found only in the N. Y. Ledger. Ask for the number dated November 4, which can now be had at any news office or book store. If you are not in reach of a news office, you can have the Ledger mailed to you for one year by sending three dollars to Robert Bonner, publisher, 182 William street, New York.
